ASIA

Traveling is often a large part of the study abroad experience. Every semester, students plan to take weekend trips to enrich their time abroad, and all have similar questions. To help you out, GPS has collected a list of travel tips and resources provided by WFU study abroad alumni.

When traveling outside of your host country, always make sure to check visa and immigration regulations for the countries you are traveling to. U.S. passport holders can go to www.travel.state.gov for further information.

PACKING FOR YOUR SHORT TRIPS WHILE ABROAD

- Pack light- only bring one bag
- Bring walking shoes (not white sneakers)
- Bring a lock for hostel lockers
- Pack printed directions to your hotel/hostel, the name of the hotel/hostel in English and the local language and the phone number
- Pack immigration paperwork and store in a safe place with your passport.
- Top-off your cell phone minutes—verify rates for out of country travel

TRAVELING BY AIR

- Take your in-country address and a pen with you on your flight
 - You will be required to write your study abroad address on the customs form given to you in-flight
- Upon arrival, generally speaking, you will go through immigration, pick-up your luggage, and then go through customs
- Make sure you are familiar with items you are allowed to bring into each country you are traveling to
 - i.e. fruit, spices and other foods may not be allowed through customs
- Book your flights early, to find better deals
 - Read the fine print! Double and triple check the dates and locations of travel before purchasing.
 - There are small airline offices located throughout the cities and tourist areas where you can book a ticket in person as some websites may not accepted your credit card
- Budget airlines may seem like a great deal, but make sure you are aware of what the cost doesn't include
- Some airlines do not have assigned seats, so make sure to arrive early and join the queue
- Most ticket costs do not include checked luggage
- Verify your check-in time and factor in travel time to the airport

BOOKING TIP: Always remember to read the fine print when booking through a budget airline. Sometimes a deal really is too good to be true once all the hidden fees add up.

TRAVELING BY RAILWAY

- Traveling by rail is a popular option especially in China
- Always try to book your train tickets at least 2-3 days ahead of time to get a better price
- Keep your ticket handy as it will be scanned inside the train once you depart the station. Never travel without proper ticket.
- Pack a snack for longer train rides as food from the train trolley or store can be quite expensive
- When booking train tickets in China, it is better to go to kiosks located conveniently throughout the city you are staying in. Remember to bring your passport and cash (you cannot use a foreign credit card) to these kiosks. You will get a student discount if you bring your student ID.

TRAVEL TIP: If you plan to take an overnight train, always make sure that someone in your party is awake. In the past, students who have taken an overnight train have had their luggage and belongings stolen once they fell asleep.

TRAVELING BY BUS

- Book a bus ticket at least 2-3 days ahead of time
 - You can book tickets on-site or in local convenience stores
- Traveling by bus can be the most economical way to travel, but it will also take the longest. Make sure to plan your time accordingly
- Overnight buses can be very uncomfortable; most students do not recommend this option

HELPFUL TIPS

- Ask your program director where to find good deals, transportation websites, and accommodation resources
- Always notify your program director/study abroad office once you have finalized your travel plans. Make sure they have your travel itinerary.
- Research the country that you are going to and learn a few words in the local language – please and thank you can go a long way
- Make copies of your passport
 - Keep one with you, one locked in your room, one with your parents, and one with GPS
- Plan your “big” trips ahead of time
 - Popular events abroad will cause airline/rail/bus rates to increase, so it is best to book ahead for these events
- Wait to book your smaller trips until after you arrive abroad and receive your course schedule
- Make a travel budget
- Plan how you will get to/from your hotel/hostel

- If you are arriving really early or late, some options may not be available, so make sure to check service hours.
- Take a map with you
- If you do not own a map of the country, it is easy to print one from Google Maps, Yahoo Maps, etc.
- Taxis can be extremely expensive, so try to use other options
- Always be aware of your check-in times
- Remember to factor in travel time to the airport, rail, or bus station to ensure you arrive on time
- Always remember to bring your immigration forms with you when you travel

HOSTELS/HOTELS

- Ask program staff or study abroad alumni for recommendations and check online reviews
 - Note when the last review was written
 - Often reading a mix of the best reviews and the worst can give you a good picture of the pros and cons
- Make sure to check how many beds your room has
 - There can be anywhere from 4 to 40+ beds in one room
- Always lock your passports and bags in a locker with a lock
 - Pack a lock in case your hostel does not provide one
- Check what is included with your price
 - Some hostels will include breakfast, discounts on tours, linens, etc.

TRAVEL ADVICE FROM STUDY ABROAD ALUMNI

It is often better to have only a vague idea of things you want to see and do because it is more rewarding to explore leisurely than to rush to see a million things in a short period of time.

—Jennifer Reed

It's really important to do research and plan ahead of time—airport transfers, museum hours, etc.

—Lauren Gensler

Pack as light as possible! It's such a hassle to drag your luggage around every place.

—Elizabeth Willis

Stay in hostels as opposed to hotels. You are more likely than not in a much more central location and you meet a lot of people. Not to mention you are spending far less money!

Things will go wrong. Stay calm.

–Sam Richards

Don't be afraid to ask for help, but make sure you're not by yourself when you do so. You should always be traveling with people anyway. Also, always know the emergency number for the country you're in. Ask for student discounts everywhere you go, but do make sure you have your ID to prove it.

–Eason Armstrong

Don't be scared to try new things!

–Stephanie Gifford

If you're going to a major city, don't just visit the touristy attractions and take pictures. My favorite memories were finding random restaurants or parks to visit with my friends. Allocate some time to explore.

–Steve Caracciolo

I found the New York Times "36 hours" pieces to be a great resource before traveling for a weekend. Each article describes in detail the best way to make the most of 36 hours in a variety of cities. Although I never followed the 36-hour plan in its entirety, the article helped provide useful information about navigation, nearby restaurants, hotels and how to see the sights most efficiently in a limited amount of time.

–Arden Smith

Bring an empty, folded up duffel bag in your larger suitcase. That way you will have a smaller, less cumbersome bag to use for weekend/day trips. At the end of your abroad experience, you also have the entire duffel bag to fill up with souvenirs and other additional items that you got abroad and want to bring back home with you.

–Katie Super

Don't be intimidated speaking to locals. They are probably very impressed that you can speak Chinese, and they will be more than willing to help you out with anything you need.

Trips to Take in China:

- Tiger Leaping Gorge (虎跳峡): Located in Yunnan Province, Tiger Leaping Gorge is a great place to travel to explore beautiful scenery. The best way to get there is taking a train from Kunming to Lijiang.
- Yuanyang Rice Terraces: These beautiful rice terraces are located in the southern part of Yunnan province. There are two minority groups who both live in this village, so it is a great way to explore the lives of Chinese minority groups (少数民族). The best way to get to this place is taking a bus from Kunming.
- Take the high speed train (高铁) from Beijing to Shanghai. The high speed train is a very fun, and nice way to travel from city to city. The trip from Beijing to Shanghai takes about 5 hours. If you go to China, taking the high speed train is definitely an experience you don't want to miss!
- Chengdu (成都) is a great city to travel to. This area of China is known for pandas. While you are here you can also take a trip to Mount Emei (峨眉山).
